David Romero, SJ was born and raised in southern California, David received a BA in Theology from Loyola Marymount University, where his study abroad experiences in El Salvador kick-started his discernment to enter the Jesuits upon graduation. He completed his philosophy studies at Fordham University in New York, spent his first year of regency working with a study abroad program in Manila, Philippines, then taught theology at Bellarmine College Preparatory in San Jose, CA. He is now in his second year of theology studies at Boston College.